

Why is it a bad idea to use recursion method to find the Fibonacci of a number?

Solution

It is not a good idea to use recursion method to find the Fibonacci of a number because each recursive call causes a push pop of the stack memory. This causes slow processing and poor performance as greater Fibonacci values are processed. This will invariably lead to a stack overflow.